THE subscribes would respect fuely inform the chizons of Louistable, and the public senerally, that he has recently introduced new style of Paintinks, which, for durability, far exceeds any other process. It is known as the riverpelas style, or Painting in Wax, and is assecptible of imparting a higher fusion to partors and ceilings, than that of oil painting. A great advantage of the Wax Painting is, that when it becomes solled, the walls may be washed, and the colors will show as bright and clear as when first painted. This style is the same as that used in the city of Pompeli, before it was harled in the lave of Mount Vesurius, and which, after many conturies, was lound to present colors unsurpassed by affalts of the present day. It is fully as cheap as that oil painting.

THE PILGRIMS' ROCK.

BY "AMELIA"

When first the lonely Mayflower threw lier canvas to the breeze,
To hear afar her Pilgrim crew,
Beyond the dark blue seas,
Proud Fredom to our land had flown,
And chose it for the brave;
Then formed the nation's corner-stone,
And set litby the ways.

And set it by the wave,
That when the Pligrims anchored there,
Their stepping-stone might he
That consecrated rock of prayer,
The bulwark of the free. And therethey stood; each pilgrim brow
Waa wan with grief and care,
And bent each manly form—but oh!
A tenderer sight was there—
Fond woman with her aweet sad face,

Fond woman with her aweet sad face,
All trembling pale and chill.
But oh! there was lu that lone place
A sight more touching still—
The cheek of childhood pale with fear,
And hushed its voice of glee;
And they'are gone, but we are here,
A bulwark for the free.

Our pilgrim sires are gone, yet still
A nation in its pride
Hath poured o'er every vale and hill,
In a bright unbroken tide;
And atill their sons shall flood the land,
While that old rock appears,
Like a pilgrim spirit born to stand
The mignty wheck of years;
And ohi while flos a the wind and wave,
That hallowed rock shall be
The threshold of the good and brave,
The bulwark of the free.
